ANIMALS IN NEPAL ARE IN DIRE NEED OF YOUR HELP

While there is no doubt that the human toll has been heavy, animals are also suffering - injured, starving, without shelter. The wellbeing of the people of Nepal is linked to the well-being of their animals.

Tree of Compassion has been activated to respond to the earthquake disaster in Nepal. On the ground to work at the Animal Liberation Sanctuary, Nepal, part of the Tibetan Buddhist monastery, Kopan, we were well placed to immediately swing into action.

While the focus of current relief efforts is understandably on the human toll, the treatment of animals will be vitally important in the weeks ahead.

There is an urgent need to treat injured animals. We are desperately in need of financial support to continue this work and to buy essential supplies and pay for veterinary services and fuel.

In Nepal, a little goes a long way so we are grateful for any amount.
